

The Empower Plant.

Heartland Consumers Power District didn't want their new headquarters to be merely functional. They saw the opportunity for something truly inspirational. Something that would inspire the public, and show them the true possibilities of sustainability. Each element of its design - from the native prairie grass landscaping and rainwater collection system, to the geothermal heating and daylighting systems - will help create a groundbreaking, LEED™ Platinum certified building. One that will do more than house a power company. It will empower people to create a greener future.
